Planning department survives in close vote

by Russ Duhaime

A slim three-vote spread has stopped Haliburton County's official plan from sliding off the shelves and into the garbage.

Three years of sporadic haggling over the need for a county-wide official plan came to a head Wednesday when Minden's Reeve tabled a motion to dismantle the county's planning and economic development departments.

Ironically, the 9-6 vote to defeat Bern Berry's motion showed unprecedented interest in county planning. After two years of disinterest, county councillors demonstrated surprising support for the unfocused planning department.

Whether this renewed interest in land-use planning will translate into action remains to be seen. However, the vote does demonstrate the level of recognition of the urgent need for sound planning.

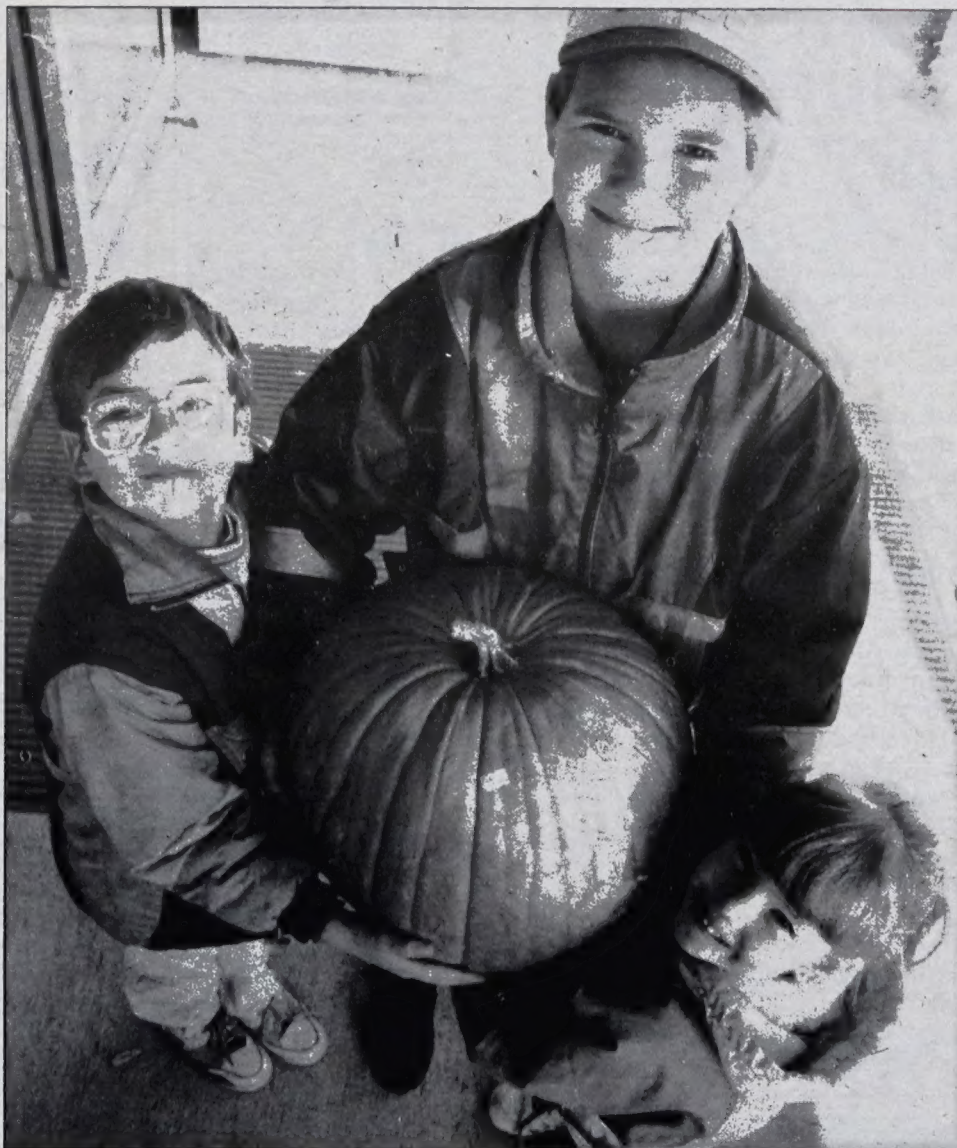

The county established its planning department in the summer of 1990 and directed Mark Stagg, the newly-hired planner, to work towards the establishment of an official plan. After almost two years of work on the task, the terms of reference for a plan were finally ready to go and council decided to scrub the mission.

The planner's planning duties were lifted and he was shuffled over to the Chamber of Commerce. Since April of 1992, Stagg's planning responsibilities have been limited to monitoring provincial initiatives.

Stagg says Wednesday's vote represents major progress for his department. In addition to maintaining his department, council gave Stagg direction to seek out funding to proceed with a strategic plan, which will spell out the aims and objectives of the county.

Although a strategic plan is not di-

McKay and Kayla Shaw lend brother Ryan a hand with one of the larger pumpkins at Minden's fruit market. The kids will be testing their carving talents when they convert their pumpkin to a glowing jack-o-lantern in preparation for Halloween. Despite rumours, trick-or-treating has not been moved ahead this year. The costumed kids will be making their rounds on Sunday.

Students ready for vote

They may be too young to vote in today's federal election, but students at Minden's elementary school will still be making their mark.

"We are also going to do our own election of Canada because we can't vote at the real election all over Canada," say Lauren Rose and Brittany Prentice.

Chris Lynd's class at Archie Stouffer Elementary School will be filling the roles as returning officers, scrutineers, enumerators, candidates and campaign managers.

Voter turn-out -- at least at the ASSES polls -- is expected to be high.

Board policy dulls skater's ambitions

by Russ Duhaime

Andrea Pawluch is getting a taste of the difficult economic realities of Canadian amateur sports.

The 17-year-old Minden skater has made an ambitious move that she hopes will propel her into the elite Canadian figure skating scene. The move, however, is proving to be costly and the Haliburton school board is reluctant to offer support.

Pawluch has left her family and friends in Minden to pursue the dream of rising to the top in her sport. To this end, she has moved to Barrie and has enrolled in an elite training program offered jointly by the Mariposa School of Skating and Innisdale High School.

The timing of her move out of Haliburton County's school system, however, is posing an unexpected obstacle. Because of the economic crunch faced by the board, it has turned down Pawluch's request to have her tuition fees transferred.

Unless trustees can be persuaded to change their minds, Pawluch will have to pay about $6,000 to stay in the program.

Traditionally, the Haliburton County Board of Education has accommodated students who moved outside the county to participate at higher levels of sport than they can find here. In fact, Education Director Brad Saunders says the board will be paying more than $7,000 this year for a Minden boy to attend school in Muskoka so he can play hockey there.

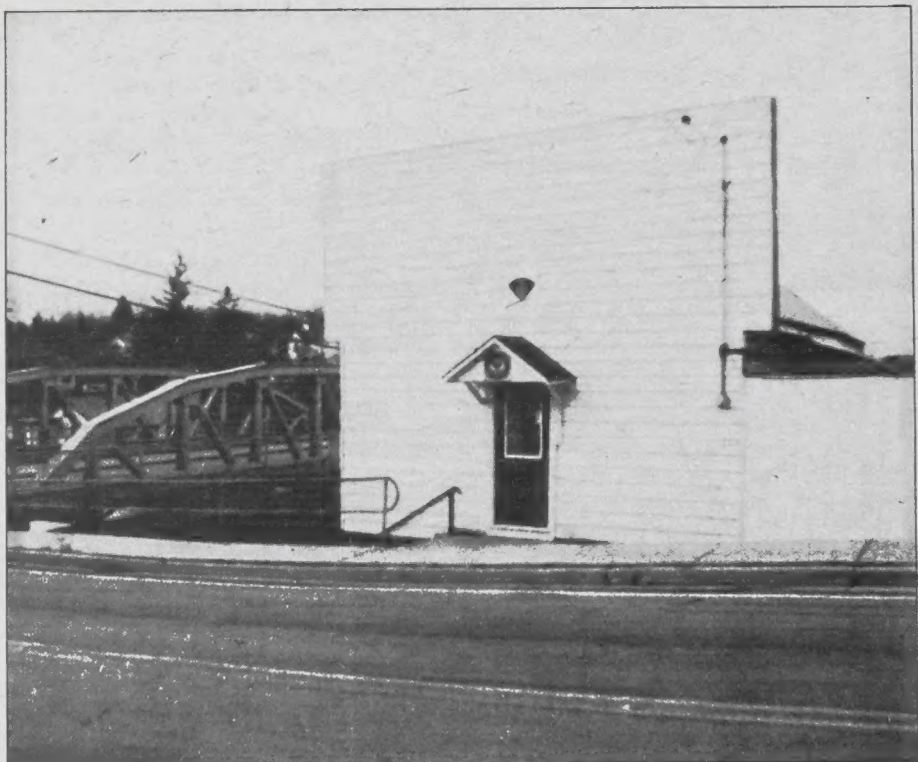

On the surface, this looks like a case of discrimination: the board is willing to pay for a hockey player but not a figure skater. Saunders, however, says this is not the case.

In paying tuition for the hockey player, Saunders says the board is honouring an existing commitment. The board agreed last year to pay his tuition and feels obliged to extend the commitment forward.

Saunders says the board has changed its attitude toward paying tuition fees for students who attend school out of the county. He says it is an economic decision that has nothing to do with sporting preferences.

Although the board has already rejected Pawluch's request for funding, she is not about to give up. "I don't give up easily," she says. "I'm not a quitter. Skating is something I believe in and if I have to come here to do it, I'll find a way."

The new home of the OPP community policing station in Kinmount is the old municipal building which has been refurbished by volunteers.

Old Kinmount municipal office is new OPP home

by Jerry Grozelle

The finishing touches are all that remain to the renovations of the old municipal office in Kinmount. The building has been transformed into a Community Policing Office and will be occupied (part time) by the Ontario Provincial Police.

Community policing in Kinmount has become a reality because of the efforts of area citizens, business people, community groups and the municipality.

"It has been a real community effort," said Ted Wilkes, one of the people who helped get the project off the ground. "I can't believe the co-operation from everybody concerned."

The old municipal office provided a perfect location for the new OPP satellite office. Located in Kinmount at the south east end of the bridge over the Burnt River, the building has been vacant since the municipality moved its operations to the new building at the southern edge of the village.

"It was a case of overhauling an old building that has been vacant for some time," Wilkes said.

The major expense was the installation of new windows and a new steel outside door. The leaky roof was repaired, the plumbing was upgraded, the furnace was overhauled. A rug was installed in the main office and a small partition now separates the work area from the visitors' area. In addition, a lot of scrubbing and painting has been done.

Labour to complete the renovations was done by volunteers. Somerville Township paid for most of the materials. All of the local service clubs were involved in some way, either by donating funds, or by providing furniture, materials and labour. The Lions Club, Kawartha Lakes Civitan Club, Kinmount Legion and Kinmount Civic Action Committee were all involved.

Local businesses also contributed labour and materials to help complete the project.

The OPP is expected to move into the building around the first of November. The official opening ceremonies are scheduled for Wednesday, November 17 at 2:00 p.m.

Last chance to register and vote

So you've missed all the other opportunities to register to vote, but you still want a chance to help decide Canada's and this riding's future?

You can still get on the voting registration list and cast your ballot today. Electors can register by applying to the deputy returning officer at the polling station and presenting acceptable identification. Officers will accept one piece of identification containing name, address and signature of the elector (such as a driving permit). If you don't have that you can present one piece containing your name and signature (such as a social insurance card, old age security card or credit card) and another with your name and address (such as a phone bill or tax bill).

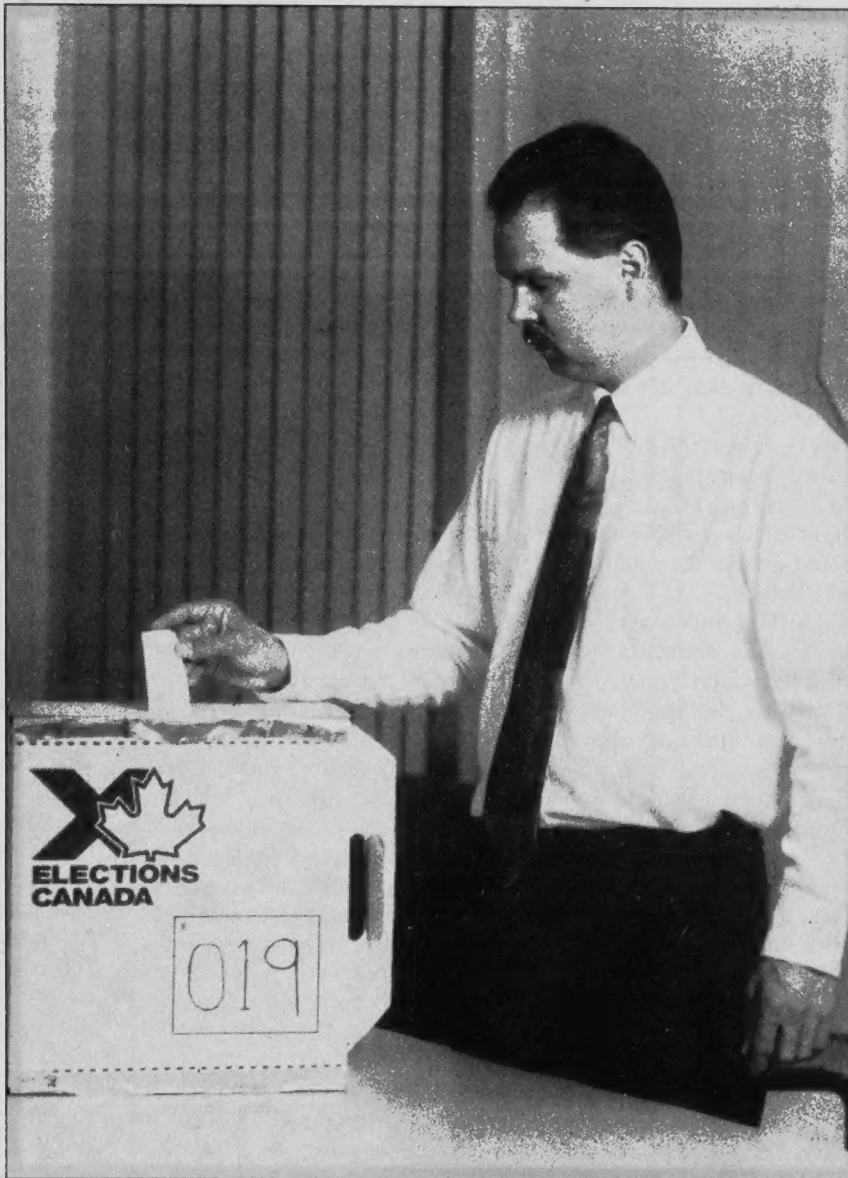

In rural ridings like Victoria-Haliburton, you can also be vouched for by another elector whose name is on the list of electors for that polling division.

It may seem obvious, but it is worth repeating that after October 25 there is no chance to vote.

Polling stations are open 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

The following is a list of polling stations in Haliburton County:

Oxtongue Community Centre
Dorset Recreation Centre
Club 35, Halls Lake
West Guilford
Stanhope Municipal Office
Eagle Lake Community Centre
Zion United Church, Carnarvon
Hyland Crest Seniors Home

Lochlin Community Centre
Walker's Riverdale Ranch, Kinmount
Glamorgan Municipal Complex

The big vote

For the first time in a federal election voters can deposit their own ballots into the ballot box. Today is voting day and if you have not registered yet, you still have a chance to take part in the election.

Where to find the candidates

The 47-day federal election campaign comes to a climax tonight after the polls close at 8 p.m.

To celebrate with the winners or cry with the losers, here's where the candidates will be tonight:

Liberals will be at their campaign office on Kent Street in Lindsay.

Conservatives will be at the Olympia Restaurant on Lindsay's Kent Street.

Reformers will start the night at the campaign office on Kent Street before moving next door to the lounge room at the Grand Hotel.

Independent supporters can join Dennis Drainville at his campaign headquarters on Lindsay Street.

Indecision, economics stifle county planning

rectly related to an official plan, Stagg says it will help to remove some of the obstacles.

A strategic plan is "a vehicle to get the gutsy issues out into the public," says Stagg. He says it will give council and understanding of what residents believe to be the planning priorities in this county.

To date, the main obstacles in the development of a county official plan have been finances and political will.

The three municipalities with the foresight to develop their own official plans (Cardiff, Dysart and Minden) will not benefit equally from a county plan. Therefore, they do not share their neighbours' enthusiasm for a county-wide plan. There is also a lack of consensus on whether there should be one plan for the whole county or two levels of official plans that recognize the existing municipal plans.

Stagg has been persistent in his drive to make council realize the importance of land-use planning. The province is telling municipalities to get their houses in order and those that do not will suffer the consequences.

Stagg says a third of future building permit applications in the seven municipalities without official plans will be rejected unless they adopt official plans.

In dollars and cents, Stagg estimates the county's building trades stand to miss out $8.4 million per year because of rejected building applications.

The need for land-use planning is particularly important here because of the sensitive geographic nature of the county. New provincial regulations are expected to be adopted that pay much greater attention to environmental concerns.

One such regulation, says Stagg, is the proposal to halt all development in significant woodland areas. He says this regulation is likely to stall development throughout Hali-burton County unless a plan is developed to spell out which woodland areas are deemed significant.

"An official plan would evaluate the quality of woodlands and designate significant areas," says Stagg. Without the planning document, he says anyone wanting to build in a wooded area "will have to go through a horrendous study."

Although the county has opted to preserve its planning department, the realization of an official plan is years in the future. Stagg says he cannot predict when a plan might be ready. Further, he does not know how much it will cost.

Stagg hopes to soon go to work on the strategic plan and have it completed in about a year. At that point, he says the county will be in a position to move ahead on the development of an official plan.

"The key thing is how long people want to take in reaching an agreement," says Stagg. "I'll go as fast as the political process will allow."

Criminals beware: 50 pairs of eyes patrol Kinmount

by Jerry Grozelle

Criminals had better steer clear of Kinmount. The community now has fifty pairs of eyes watching what's going on in and around the village.

Over the past few weeks, a Neighbourhood Watch has been set up. Fifty people have been trained by the Ontario Provincial Police in the art of observation.

Funded by the Kinmount Legion, these people have been given the instruction necessary to help put those involved in criminal activities behind bars.

Kinmount has been divided into five sections with a group leader assigned to each section. Members of the Watch keep track of suspicious activities by taking notes, recording licence numbers, and noting descriptions of suspicious vehicles and people.

Anyone observing a criminal activity will call the police, while suspicious acts are noted for future reference in case of a police investigation.

As one Neighbourhood Watch participant says: "We provide the eyes and ears for the police. They can't be everywhere at once."

With the Neighbourhood Watch in place, the chance of criminal activity going undetected is minimal. The program has proven very effective in controlling crime in other areas.

With the Community Policing Office opening soon in the village and Neighbourhood Watch now set up, Kinmount is expected to be a safer place for both residents and seasonal visitors alike.

Skater aims for gold, Board refuses help

Decision based on economics, not discrimination, says school board

She will be going to the board meeting Tuesday night in an attempt to convince trustees to pay her tuition. In addition, she has been in contact with a lawyer for advice in this struggle.

The skating program in Barrie is unique in that it combines academic studies with skating practice. The skating school is adjacent to the high school and the two have joined in an effort to offer a co-op education that provides a flexible academic schedule for competitive skaters. Students obtain high school credits while training at the national training centre.

Pawluch says Minden has an excellent skating club, but it can not offer the flexibility that she enjoys in Barrie. "I was really tied down in Minden," she says. She had trouble juggling school and skating, which occasionally meant handing school assignments in late. Some teachers were understanding, but others were not, she says.

The young skater says things are very different in Barrie. The program offers flexibility in scheduling school time and ice time. "There's a lot more freedom to skate when I want to skate. If I'm having a good day, I can go and benefit from it. If not, I can go to school and come back later."

For four days a week, Pawluch spends from three to four hours on the ice as part of her physical education program. She is also enrolled in physics and math during

Since this program is not available in Haliburton County, Pawluch may argue that the board is bound by the Education Act to pay her tuition. The act says students have the right to attend any secondary school to take subjects not offered in their school district that are required for admission into any trade, profession or calling.

The board, on the other hand, may argue that this program is not strictly "required" for Pawluch's skating career.

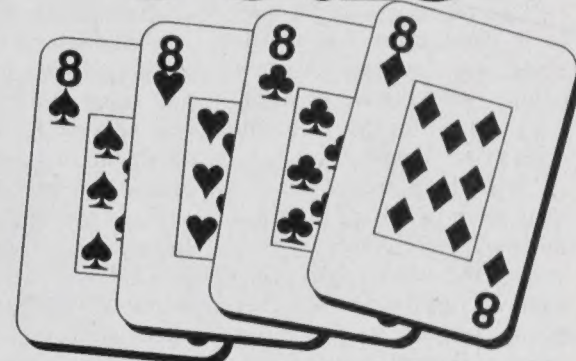

Pawluch's meeting with the board tomorrow will be a closed session because of the legal implications.

County should reconsider one-tier option residents say

by Russ Duhaime

One-tier government may be a dead issue for politicians, but at least a few county residents are continuing the push for this efficient form of government.

With the potential for annual savings of up to $1.5 million, two residents are asking the county to reconsider its rejection of the proposal outlined in the Wace report. County councillors, however, were unresponsive when the matter was raised at last Wednesday's meeting.

In a letter to council, Jean Clarke writes: "We can no longer afford the luxury of parochial bickering. A move like this, with a ward system, might get us working together as well as saving money."

County Council paid about $40,000 this year for Steven Wace, a consultant, to take a look at the county and find ways of improving efficiency. This study turned up dozens of inefficiencies, but it said the greatest potential for savings is through an amalgamation of the 10 municipalities into one level of government. Wace estimated that annual savings of between $1.2 million and $1.5 million could be achieved by eliminating the duplication of services under the present system of municipal government in the county.

Although no councillors publicly disputed the potential for savings, the idea was scrapped. In place of amalgamation, councillors passed a resolution to encourage better co-operation among municipalities.

Leslie Adams says county council is being irresponsible in its rejection of the Wace report recommendations. In her letter to council, she writes: "When you refuse to implement a report that would improve services and save $1.5 million each year, you are acting irresponsibly."

Adams says county residents should be informed of the contents of the Wace report and be given an opportunity to provide input into the decisions reached. "We object to a few residents behind closed doors making decisions on such an important matter and then trying to hide the report and the discussions leading up to your decisions."

The Wace report is public information and copies have been provided to the media. All of council's deliberations on this report, however, were done in private sittings.

Banquet scrubbed

In recognition of the "hard times," Haliburton County Council has agreed to forego this year's Warden's Banquet.

The annual celebration which marks the end of a Warden's term in office was cancelled on the recommendation of Warden Chris Hodgson.

At Wednesday's meeting, Hodgson said the county is struggling to meet its financial commitments. Considering the economic climate, he asked fellow councillors for approval to cancel the banquet, which is estimated to cost about $4,000. With the exception of Stanhope Reeve Fred Gardiner, all were in agreement with the request.

Minden Reeve Bern Berry suggested that future Warden's Banquets should be held every three years. This way, the county could honour all the wardens who have served during the three-year term of office.

The Minden Fairground looked much like a farmer's field Saturday as volunteers went to work tilling the soil and leveling the field in preparation for a new seeding this spring. All the equipment and labour was donated for this project, which is designed to improve the grounds for the increasing variety of activities. The township has agreed to pay for the lime and seed, while the main users of the field arranged for the manpower.

Reconsider one-tier plan

If Haliburton County could shave more than a million dollars from its annual budget while improving services, how many voters would be in favour of it?

This is not a pipe dream. The potential for annual savings of between $1.2 million and $1.5 million exists. Assuming this money is used to lever provincial and federal grants, these savings could mean an extra $3 million to $4 million for the county to work with.

With an extra $4 million each year the county could finance the construction of a new Minden hospital; the on-again, off-again waste management masterplan could be completed; an official plan could become a reality; the expansion or construction of a new county office could be realized; we could stop postponing necessary road work, and we could buy enough firefighting equipment to fully protect all parts of the county.

The potential for savings stems from the recommendation in the Wace report for a one-tier government. By eliminating the duplication of services offered by the 10 municipalities, Steven Wace says significant savings can be achieved.

Considering all the good that could result from these savings, it's difficult to understand why county council has refused to give this potential a full public hearing. County councillors have conducted indepth discussions on the matter in private meetings, but they have never publicly explained why some are opposed to the move. We don't even know which councillors are opposed to the move.

One-tier government would be a radical change in the way municipal government functions in this county. Currently, there are 10 municipalities in the county with 10 administrations and 51 elected officials. The proposal would amalgamate these municipalities into one level of government to serve the entire county.

Considering the nature of the change, we believe councillors are correct in their refusal to implement the changes. They do not have a mandate to push ahead with such a move without first consulting with their electors. We do not agree, however, that the idea should be abandoned. Instead, there should be a great deal of consideration paid to potential benefits and drawbacks of this type of government.

We feel the issue should be brought back to the table for full public debate. In addition, we urge council to consider asking the public, in the form of a referendum in next November's municipal elections, if they endorse this move.

If one-tier government is rejected by the residents of this county, then, and only then, should the issue be trashed. If, on the other hand, voters endorse the proposal, our politicians can act in confidence that they are representing our wishes.

Sixth studio tour a success

Editor:

I would like to thank your paper for helping to make this, our sixth Studio Tour, the most successful yet. By the attendance reports, which were for the most part fairly accurate estimates, we think that over 2,500 people participated in our event this year. Although the weather did not cooperate this year, spirits were high and the colours were beautiful.

I would also like to publicly thank all of the local business people and information centres who supported us by putting up our posters, distributing our brochures and putting in a good word for us. Thank you all!

We very much appreciate the local support we have been getting the past few years. The Studio Tour is becoming a bit of a cultural event and your readers may be interested to know that the tour is organized and entirely funded by the participating artists and craftspeople.

Thanks again everybody.

Photography captures nature without the kill

Editor:

Late autumn is here, favourite time of mine to hike in the woods. Donning my orange hat and coat so I don't get mistaken for a freezer full, I quietly proceed down the trail. The smells of the bush are real. The sounds of distant gunfire are not. Over the rise, there he is, a huge buck stepping through the swamp. Just as he raises his head, I line up my sights and snap!

I got him. Later his portrait hangs on my wall for all to enjoy while he continues his deserved life in the wild.

Why are there two hospital building funds in Minden?

Editor:

Lately I've noticed signs soliciting support for the Minden Hospital Building Fund. If this is a separate group from Rotary Minden Hospital Building Fund, myself and I'm sure many others who were involved and also donated monies are wondering what is going on as it is difficult enough to raise funds for a common goal without having competing groups.

The Rotary fund was started some years ago, and has in the neighborhood of $22,000 as of the last annual financial statement in The Times. The committee was made up of some Rotary members and several others from the community with the understanding it would someday be a community undertaking, with Rotary giving the pledge to pick up all administrative costs to ensure every dollar was used in its entirety for the purpose of building a hospital. One reason there was no concentrated campaign is the fact that despite initial efforts to obtain a charitable number the Rotary was unsuccessful at the time. I have no idea why a second group would want to create a duplicate fund, unless there are reasons the public are not privy to.

This is a small community and as such should be working and concentrating as a single body for the common good. If not, we shouldn't wonder why this country is in turmoil because of personal power struggles. Let's clear the air and resolve this so that Minden residents know what they are donating to.

Autumn's blanket

Hot diggity! Wieners are wonderful

I don't mean to whine, but I face a lot of trials in my working day.

There's the first one in the morning of course - hitting the deck. Lying there with the blankets up under my chin and my noggin burrowed into the pillow, I can quickly list 12 reasons why getting up qualifies as an Extremely Inferior Idea.

Alas, rising is but the first of many tribulations. There is the cold blast of water that invariably precedes my shower. There is my wretched cat meowooooowing piteously as it threads itself between my ankles. He's saying, "Feed me for God's sake - it's been hours since I ate those chicken bones in the garbage."

Other daily afflictions? Oh, my yes. There is the scraping of the windshield; the monotony of the chrome and plastic conga commute of vehicles on the highway into town. There is the unpleasant thug who mans the security desks, there is the depressing realization that yes, I'm 15 minutes late as usual, and yes, everyone else is on time, working hard, taking just a moment to glance at their watches as I hustle by.

The daily hassles. But none of them come even close to the mortification I feel when I face the greatest hurdle of all.

It comes at the end of my working day, when I leave my office building and head for the parking lot. Be calm, I tell myself. Almost there. Just another few yards of sidewalk to freedom.

But no. He's there, blocking my path. He's always there, Gus is. Just Gus and his cart.

Black'n White

by Arthur Black

A hot dog cart.

He sells me a hot dog just about every working day. I don't need a hot dog. All those hot dogs are not good for me. I can't afford to buy hot dog after hot dog, day after day.

But I do. I can't resist.

I flat out love hot dogs.

Which is odd, because I mostly don't like junk food. I don't buy chocolate bars or jelly beans. I've never seen the inside of a Taco Bell or an Arby's and I only go to MacDonald's for the coffee or to use the washroom (great washrooms at MacDonald's).

Hot dogs - different story. But then, as junk food goes, the hot dog is practically venerable. Nobody knows exactly how long folks have been wedging wieners in buns and slathering them with mustard, but the name alone goes all the way back to 1906.

Hot dogs were already popular fare back then, but they weren't called hot dogs. They were tagged everything from frankfurters to wieners and bread bangers on a bun, tube steak sandwiches...

Even dachshund sausages.

At a New York Giants baseball game at the Polo Grounds in 1906, a newspaper cartoonist by the name of Tad Dorgan sat in the stands watching the game and listening to the food vendors bellow "Getcher red hot dachshund sausages!"

He thought about the vendors "barking"...he studied the dachshund-like swoop of the wiener in his hand...and something clicked in the cartoonist's brain. Dorgan whipped out a sketch pad and doodles a picture of a real dachshund dog, sandwiched in a bun and covered with mustard. Back at the office, Dorgan touched up the cartoon, then tried to come up with a caption.

He wanted the caption to read, "GET YOUR RED HOT DACHSHUND SAUSAGES!" - but he wasn't sure how to spell dachshund.

His deadline was looming, Dorgan thought 'ah, what's the difference?' and he printed "GET YOUR HOT DOGS!" and created one of the most popular phrases of the century.

Hot dogs show up in songs and on ski slopes; in centre field and every day conversation.

Win the lottery? One of the things you could yell is "Hot Dog!" Remember the Perry Como hit that goes "Hot diggity, dog diggity, boom what you do to me"? Kids who do somersaults on skis are called hot doggers. Blue Jay slugger Rickey Henderson is a millionaire hot dogger.

And I'm not the only one who's addicted. Nearly 17 billion hot dogs are turned out each year. I'm not eating all of them.

Actually, I can't hold a napkin to a New Yorker who captured the world record by scarfing 17 hot dogs in 12 minutes.

Think he'll ever look at another hot dog? Sure he will. With relish.

In defence of Bark Lake leadership centre

Editor:

I would like to offer a few words in defence of Bark Lake, the Ontario Camp Leadership Centre which George Simmons feels is simply a facility which "provides free holidays for a great many people" (Letter to the editor, October 4). He also questions spending millions of taxpayer's dollars on "leadership training - whatever that is".

Bark Lake is an integral part of the summer camp counsellor-in-training (CIT) program. It also provides a variety of programs for school groups, adults and conferences. Many of the camps in the Highlands send contingents of 16-year-olds to Bark Lake for an intensive two week learning and training session as part of their training to become a counsellor.

I attended Bark Lake several years ago and it was anything, but a vacation. We learned a variety of skills that are important to any leader or counsellor - how to teach a skill in a fun yet effective manner, how to help kids (and adults) from a variety of different social and cultural backgrounds and play together harmoniously, how to organize and plan lessons, how to "be there" for a homesick camper. These are not skills which come naturally to everyone. At Bark Lake share their ideas and skills with each other and the Bark leaders in order to find out what things work and don't work in camp (and the real world).

If Bark Lake did not exist camps would lose a very valuable teaching, learning resource centre for their prospective staff members. Society, too, would lose out because the skills that we learned at Bark Lake are important in the working world: how to be a leader, a member of a team, commitment and responsibility. A good counsellor, leader or teacher remembers what an amazing experience it was to be a camper or student and tries to pass that experience on to others so that they can enjoy and learn as well.

Mr. Simmons also states that Bark Lake provides very little to the local economy, both in terms of employment and money. The facility is operational year-round, so the staff lives there, or in the area, and they spend money locally thus helping out the local economy. Bark

Lake also ensures that there is a core of trained counsellors to work in the many summer camps in the Highlands. These summer camps buy much of their supplies and food locally, and pay municipal taxes.

I think the Bark Lake facility is a very important training centre for the young people of Ontario. They will one day be leaders in business and society - give them a chance to gain some of the skills which will help them to be the best leaders possible.

Family of four turns the world

For all the whining married people do about their spouses and children, the world still revolves around the family of four.

Oh sure, married people may not be able to do whatever they want, and they may envy the freedom of choice their single friends have, but deep down they're comfortable. They know the world was not designed for the single person - young or old.

The governments of Canada and Ontario recognize this fact and so do the media. Whenever taxes go up (do they ever go down?) statistics are released showing what happens to a mythical average family of four when the majority of Canadians do not live in a family of four. There are millions of single folks with average incomes who have to deal with a world not designed with them in mind.

Take a stroll through the grocery store for example. There are plenty of frozen dinners for singles in a hurry, on a diet or bulking up. But they had better be rich singles, the price on these food slabs is rich while the food is not. Unless you work for the government, chances are these frozen entrees are out of the financial question.

Single people can't buy in economical bulk sizes, however, because the food generally rots, suffers freezer burn or walks away on its own power after spending a week at the back of

by Andy Holloway

the fridge.

A 10-pound bag of potatoes currently sits in one of my cupboards. The bag was bought two months ago and about 10 potatoes have been used. I'm not sure what's left in the bag nor do I want to know any more. Every time I go to open the bag an ominous whispering begins, "Be afraid, be very afraid."

Buying frozen foods in bulk is not much of a help either.

There is a certain brand of frozen fish in batter that uses hockey cards as a selling gimmick. In the economy box of 12 fillets you get one card. So far so good, except you need 14 more cards to complete the set.

If one really wanted the top goalies of all time (and how a little pup like Felix Potvin can already be compared with Johnny Bower and Bernie Parent escapes me) then you have to buy at least 15 boxes. That's 180 pieces of fish. A single person would have to eat a serving of three fish sticks per day for 60 straight days to earn the set. And that's assuming no doubles are collected.

Realistically, one would have to buy at least 30 boxes of fish to complete the set. That's 360 pieces of fish or nearly half a year of fish and paste.

The promotion started earlier this month so your last chance for buying a box would be sometime in November. Now what single person has a freezer capable of buying 30 boxes of fish? My own freezer holds a loaf of bread, a pound of meat and some juice tins. It was not designed to hold 360 fillets nor the 24 packages of bread one had to buy in the space of three weeks last summer to collect Toronto Blue Jays cards.

There are, however, advantages to living alone. No one nags, you can leave bottles on the television and it's fairly easy to find your personal toiletries in the morning without too much of a fuss.

Other people may find the squalor you live in quite unbearable, but I believe in keeping things tidy even if not particularly clean. If you're a single male you can often get other people to clean for you without any cajoling on your part. No one expects us to be clean anyway.

A friend of mine came by the other day and while rinsing out a glass asked innocently, "What's this black stuff on the dish rack?"

I shrugged my shoulders indifferently, "Uh, I dunno, mold maybe."

"Gross," and she cleaned it all off, and the stove as well.

Now if I could just find a way to make someone clean up the bathroom....

Congratulations

All the HHSS athletic teams and their players deserve praise, but senior soccer, field hockey and football and the junior field hockey and football teams deserve an extra pat on the back for their play this season.

Senior Redmen win the west again

It was not their best game of the year, but the senior Haliburton Highlands Redmen football team won the Kawartha West title anyway.

The Redmen defeated the Lindsay Collegiate Spartans 27-1 for their sixth straight win against no losses. Their undefeated record allowed the Redmen to automatically advance to the Kawartha Finals which will be held next week in Peterborough.

The Redmen will play against the winner of the tough Peterborough division on Friday, November 5. An example of how tough the Peterborough clubs are is that the Crestwood Mustangs were recently extended an invitation to compete in the Metro Bowl, the top high school tournament in Ontario.

To stop the Mustangs, who are the likely winners of the Peterborough division, the Redmen will have to come up with a better game than they did against the Spartans last Friday.

The Redmen coughed up the ball several times, dropped passes that should have been caught and the Spartans were also able to run against the defence. Although they came close to scoring on a few occasions, the Spartans fumbled the ball away in crucial situations allowing the Redmen to stop the drive and remain on top.

The Redmen also had a few drives stopped by an inability to hang on to the ball. Against the Spartans it did not matter, but those mistakes will really hurt them in the Kawartha finals said coach Tim Davies who was not happy with his team's play.

"The Spartans are a big team and they ran fairly effectively against us and whoever we play in two weeks will also be big so we'll have to do better at stopping the run," said Davies.

Field hockey team fourth

One of the best seasons ever for the senior Haliburton Highlands field hockey team ended with a fourth place finish at the Kawartha Finals.

Haliburton coach Kit Pizze said this year's squad was one of the better teams the school has had and thought they may have been able to do better at the tournament. But a combination of factors prevented Haliburton from advancing to the Central Ontario finals.

In their first game, Haliburton battled to a scoreless tie with Adam Scott. Haliburton then played Crestwood immediately following their first game and won 1-0. Lindsay Francis scored on a set-up by Jenn Bradford. While they played, Adam Scott rested on the side-Redmen receiver Chris Greenfield hangs on to the ball for dear life while Lindsay Collegiate Spartans try to strip the ball away. Greenfield caught one touchdown pass from Jay Hughes and the Redmen beat the Spartans 27-1.

Andy Bacon started the scoring with a touchdown run in the first quarter. Bacon put in another good game totalling 194 yards along the ground.

While Bacon was racking up huge yardage once again, quarterback Jay Hughes also had another good game throwing for 120 yards and three touchdown passes. Hughes would have had twice his total of passing yards if his receivers had been able to haul in a few more of his passes.

The first passing touchdown was to Chris Greenfield in the second quarter and Peter Van Leeuwen caught the second touchdown pass later that quarter to give the Redmen a 20-0 lead heading into the second half. Jamie Keefer converted on two of the touchdowns for the extra point.

Kevin Morissette scored the final touchdown pass early in the fourth quarter on a nice 34 yard pass from Hughes to make the score 27-1 when the convert was successfully completed.

The Spartans scored their only point on single in the third quarter as they self-destructed time and time again with penalties and fumbles. The Redmen recovered five fumbles on defence and several more on offence. Davies said Mark Morissette and Chris Greenfield had good games on the defensive side of the ball while Peter Brohman led the team in tackles.

Davies said the team's so-so play could have been because it was hard for the players to get motivated against a team like the Spartans when they had beaten the second place team 49-1 a week earlier. As well, the Spartans were up for the game to end their season on a high note said Davies.

The Redmen should have no problem getting motivated for the Kawartha finals particularly if they do face the Crestwood Mustangs who shellacked them 36-6 last fall.

Hamilton scores five in Minden league action

Minden Mens Recreational hockey swung back into action last Monday with the first night of triple-header games this season.

In the opening game of the year KDD Catering doubled up Westside Jug City 4-2 on the strength of Jeff Howe's three goal, four point performance.

KDD opened up the scoring in the first with Scott Danilko converting a pass from Howe. Howe then scored his first of the night with assists to Doug Aldworth and Les Tomso before Daryl Ward responded for Westside's first goal.

Howe scored two goals in the second period before Gary Nelson popped in the final goal for Westside. Nelson also assisted on Westside's first goal while Paul Mayo and Mike Keaney picked up the other assists. For KDD, Ivan Ingram assisted on Howe's third goal.

Home Hardware clobbered Sid Stamp Fuels 5-1 in the night's second match-up.

Brian Shaw scored three goals for Home Hardware as they cruised through the second period after being tied 1-1 at the end of the first period. Harrison scored the Home side's first goal as well to give him four on the night.

The lone goal for the Stampers was by Gord Wood with an assist from Charlie Telfer.

Ritchie Mills scored the other goal for Home Hardware with an assist from Boomer Stamp who picked up two other assists as well. Mills also received two assists and Tom Miscio picked up a single point to round out Home Hardware's scoring.

In the final match-up Hartwick was never behind in a 6-2 thumping of The Times as Scott Hamilton poured in five goals including four in the second period.

Opening the scoring was Hartwick's Chad Connelly with an assist from Andy Scoung. Hamilton then scored the first of his many goals with an assist to John Ballantyne. The Times got one back later in the first period when Andy Campbell converted with assists from Lawrence Loughheed and Doug Schell.

The Times also got one goal in the second, but it was sandwiched by four goals from Hamilton, two on either side. Loughheed scored for The Times with assists going to Schell and Harold Cowen. Assisting on Hamilton's goals were Dan Kunkel, Chad Connelly, Andy Scoung, and Bern Berry. One of Hamilton's goals was unassisted.

Game of the Week

Novice C: Haliburton at Minden

The score was tied at 1-1 for a brief time in the first period, but a big, strong Haliburton Huskies team proved to be more than the Minden Monarchs could handle last Thursday night at the Arena. The final score was lopsided in the Huskies' favour, but the Monarchs continued to press for goals and never gave up - and isn't that the real goal of minor hockey players everywhere.

Cheering the Jays on to victory

Top left: A young Toronto Blue Jays fan bundles up against the bracing wind last Thursday at Archie Stouffer, to show his support for the Jays' World Series ambition.

If the Toronto Blue Jays had heard the support from Archie Stouffer Elementary students last Thursday afternoon, they would have easily conquered the Philadelphia Phillies.

The students' loud, 15 minute voice of support probably did not reach the City of Brotherly Love in time for the game (rush hour traffic and all). But it did arrive in time for the weekend when millions of Canadians celebrated the return of the World Series to Toronto.

The students were decorated in blue face paint, many banners were displayed and costumes put on despite the cold, windy weather that hit Minden.

Top right: Banners were made in class by some of the older students, to be shown to the whole school during the 15 minute show of support for the Jays. The banners blew around in the strong wind and a couple were unfortunately ripped apart.

Bottom right: And of course, there were those students who went the extra mile painting not only on paper, but also on their faces.

Ithaca Deerslayer II proves its mettle

by Jerry Grozelle

If you thought a shotgun shooting slugs was strictly a short-range proposition, think again.

I recently had the opportunity to put an Ithaca Deerslayer II with a three-inch chamber through its paces at the range. The results were really impressive. I've shot rifles that wouldn't group as well at 100 yards as this pump action shotgun with a rifled 20-inch barrel.

When I was making arrangements to test a Deerslayer II with Martin Phillips, Marketing Director of T-Man Enterprises Inc., the Canadian distributor for the Ithaca line, I didn't specify a barrel length. I was surprised when he chose to send a 20-inch barrelled version instead of the 25-inch model. For an accuracy test, everybody knows the longer the barrel (within reason) the better accuracy you're likely to get. If that's the case, the 25-inch Deerslayer II must be a real tack driver.

No meaningful accuracy test would be possible with open sights so, before heading out to the range, Lorne Parno of the Norland Trading Company's gun shop installed a 4X40 Simmons Whitetail Classic scope on the Ithaca for me. The scope (which was supplied by Coast To Coast Sports Marketing of Moncton, NB, the Simmons distributor) proved to be a good match for the gun. It features a wide angle view, excellent light-gathering qualities with the 40 millimetre objective lens, a duplex reticle and a non-glare finish.

Grant Morrison, a long time hunter and

by Jerry Grozelle

outdoorsman, volunteered to accompany me to the range to help out. He was curious to see how the short-barrelled gun would perform and he's still telling anyone who'll listen how well the gun shoots.

After the initial sighting-in at 50 yards it was clear that the Deerslayer II was capable of amazing accuracy. Starting out with Federal 2 3/4-inch Sabot slugs, it was soon punching three-shot groups of about an inch and a half (centre-to-centre).

Moving out to the 100-yard mark, I was able to shoot a three-shot group that measured an inch and seven-eighths between the centres of the two farthest holes. The two closest holes could easily be covered with a loonie. And those holes were .50 calibre or half an inch in diameter! I'm convinced that an experienced bench rest shooter could put five of those .50 calibre holes in a cluster not much bigger than a loonie at 100 yards with the sabot type slugs.

For those who may be unfamiliar with sabots, they are an hour-glass shaped one-ounce lead slug encased in a two-piece plastic sleeve. The sleeve conforms to the lands and grooves in the rifled barrel, imparting the spin to the projectile without deforming the bullet. The sleeve drops away after exiting the muzzle.

Both Federal and Winchester supplied sabot-type slugs for the test and both proved equally accurate, with no noticeable change in point of impact.

For variety, I also tried some non-sabot rifled slugs from ACTIV and Challenger.

The ACTIV slugs proved more accurate than the Challengers but with their all-plastic hulls, they had a tendency to stick in the magazine of the test gun. Stretching the magazine tube spring to increase the tension didn't solve the problem. I suspect the close tolerances in the manufacturing process of the gun aren't compatible with the all-plastic ACTIV hulls.

The Ithaca Deerslayer II is an impressive rifle, says outdoors columnist.

Senior soccer Redmen head into finals on a high

Haliburton Highlands Redmen senior soccer team ran into their first big test of the year and fared very well despite being on the wrong end of a 2-0 score against Port Hope.

The match was an exhibition game as the Redmen try to gear up for the tougher competition sure to await them in the Kawartha Finals this Thursday in Lindsay. During the regular season the Redmen went undefeated in the Kawartha West and were only involved in one close game - a 1-0 win against LCVI in the final week of play.

Against Port Hope last Wednesday coach Walter Tose said the boys played well and had a number of good scoring chances, but could not bulge the twine. Port Hope is a strong skills team, especially through the air and they capitalized for two goals.

The loss was the Redmen's first, but Tose said it was also good for the team. The Redmen were missing regular goalie Bruce Milne, but Lutz Haedicke was strong in net as his replacement. But taking Haedicke out of the midfield was a harder factor to replace.

"It was a confidence booster especially considering we were missing two players and with the high winds."

The wind on Wednesday in Port Hope was similar to what the Highlands experienced on Thursday and played havoc with both teams. Oddly enough, the Redmen had better scoring chances against the wind in the second half than they did in the first. Darren Parsons had a sure winner pushed wide by the wind while Jonathan Bishop was stopped on a breakaway. Ryan Goodall also played a strong game for the Redmen said Tose.

Tose said the Redmen returned to their ground game - controlled passing and using their dribbling skills - against Port Hope and will continue that tactic against their next opponents.

The two teams may meet again in the Kawartha finals if each wins the first game, or if both lose their first game. The Redmen will be playing the second place team out of the Peterborough division while Port Hope will play the top ranked team. The Redmen's first game is at 10 a.m. at Lindsay Collegiate.

Juniors earn west bragging rights

The junior Haliburton Highlands Redmen football squad completed a rare feat as they won the Kawartha West title for the second year in a row to complement the senior's double victory.

The rare double-double was the first time in Haliburton Highlands history that the football teams had accomplished back-to-back wins. It was also only the second time that both the Redmen squads had gone undefeated during the year.

After watching the seniors beat the Lindsay Collegiate Spartans, the juniors held up their end of the deal with a 33-0 win of their own.

The shut-out win gave the Redmen a 6-0 record. Coach Bruce Griffith said the Redmen also set a new record for giving up the least amount of points during the year by allowing just one touchdown and nine points. On offence the Redmen have scored 163 points in outclassing the rest of the Kawartha West.

Colin Klages started the juniors rolling by kicking a single in the first quarter. That was the only scoring during the opening period as the Redmen were not playing very well. Like the seniors the juniors fumbled the ball several times. Most of the time they recovered their own fumbles, but the mistakes did stop whatever drive the team was on and their momentum.

In the second quarter Mike Bradley scored the first of his three touchdowns of the afternoon running 16 yards on a third down and one gamble. Bradley also kicked the convert to give his team an 8-0 lead.

Later in the quarter the offence got on track and Richie Simmons and Bradley scored touchdowns to give the Redmen a 20-0 lead. Bradley's score came on a 20 yard dash with under three minutes left in the half. Bradley kicked one convert and had another blocked.

Coach Griffith said he wanted to use his second stringers in the second half to give everybody a chance, but because the starters had not gotten untracked he left them in the game. Bradley scored his third touchdown early in the third quarter, but the convert attempt was blocked. Bradley ended up with 232 yards rushing at the tailback position while Andrew McKelvey tallied up another 58 yards straight up the middle with some hard running.

This is Mike Harris.

A lot of people know him as "The Taxfighter" because he's been battling taxes for eight years. As a father of two young boys, he understands the need to reform education as a successful small businessperson, he knows how red tape and taxes can kill jobs and as a champion of direct democracy, he believes in giving the public a real say in developing policy.

The Mike Harris program of public consultation began in November of 1991 with the first paper in the New Directions series. Since then ... through Task Forces and public hearings ... by phone, FAX and mail ... tens of thousands of Ontarians have had their concerns and ideas included in policy decisions.

MIKE HARRIS has something to share with you.

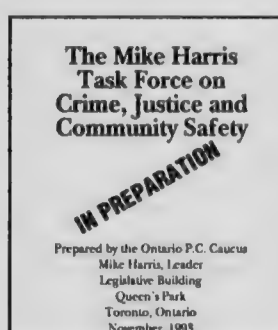

New Directions Vol. I

This paper addresses Ontario's economic problems and details PC Leader Mike Harris' proposals for developing comprehensive economic strategies and for bringing jobs back to Ontario. It was first published in the Fall of '91 and is currently being updated.

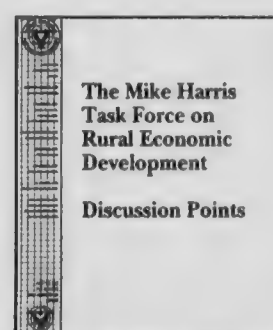

New Directions Vol. II

For those teachers, parents, students and concerned citizens who feel that Ontario's education system needs to be revamped, this paper is for you! To promote the key themes of excellence, opportunity and accountability in education, Volume II examines a series of policy alternatives.

New Directions Vol. III

We launched the Crime, Justice & Community Safety Task Force in January '93. By travelling Ontario to hold public hearings, and by distributing discussion materials, we have been able to prompt public response. The results will be published in Volume III.

New Directions Discussion Paper

We held the first Task Force on Rural Economic Development in August of '93. So far, we've heard from people in Sparta, Simcoe, Delhi, Woodstock, Tillsonburg, Eastwood, Haliburton, and Lindsay. We will spend a year visiting towns and looking for new opportunities. Then we'll publish the results.

New Directions Discussion Paper

Despite creating 80% of our jobs, small business in Ontario is being strangled by taxes and paper. Mike Harris said "enough" and launched The Task Force on Cutting Red Tape and Growing Small Business this fall. The results will be published in 1994.

Provincial Liberal leader Lyn McLeod says she has not heard any rumours about when a by-election will be called for Victoria-Haliburton. McLeod was at John O'Reilly's campaign headquarters on Friday.

Riding still awaiting by-election call

by Andy Holloway

Victoria-Haliburton residents will have to wait a little longer for a provincial representative says Liberal leader Lyn McLeod.

McLeod said she has not heard any rumours or information about when a by-election is going to be called in the Victoria-Haliburton riding. The seat is now vacant after Dennis Drainville left to run in the federal election as an Independent. McLeod was in Lindsay to give one final boost to John O'Reilly's federal election campaign.

Despite not having an official MPP, the area has been receiving representation at the provincial level by both the leaders of the Liberals and Progressive Conservative parties. Mike Harris is encouraging residents who have provincial concerns to call his office while McLeod is doing the same.

And it seems to be working. McLeod said that a number of people have called her office since she made the offer to help local residents a few weeks ago. She did not have official numbers, but did recall two people who made calls concerning land use permits earlier in the week.

"It's important to know they have a voice at Queen's Park and that their concerns can be heard," said McLeod of the temporary arrangement.

The NDP has also yet to call a by-election in Essex South in Windsor, a seat that has been vacant for a long time. The provincial government has to call by-elections within six months of a seat being vacated. This is too long a period said McLeod. The Liberals, she said, have introduced a private member's bill to reduce the waiting period to 70 days.

The Victoria-Haliburton seat has been empty for about 40 days.

McLeod said she suspects the by-election call for both Essex South and Victoria-Haliburton will come at the same time so that if the NDP lose both seats they will not be hit by the poor press twice.

If you have a provincial concern you wish addressed you can call McLeod's office at 1-800-567-1995 or Mike Harris' office at 1-800-665-6453.

Juniors win west

In the fourth quarter Klages connected with Darnell Gilbert on a 17-yard-pass for the team's fifth touchdown.

Up by 33, the second stringers were given a chance and Griffith said he used 39 of the 40 boys who made the trip.

While the offence struggled, although you would not know it from the final score, the defence was superb. Jamie Swinson recovered four fumbles while Jeremy Durkin recorded three sacks. Quentin McCormack and Jeff Wray also played tough defence recording over 10 tackles each. The defence is the teams' strength right now said Griffiths. The juniors will play the Kawartha Finals in Haliburton on Thursday, November 4. Their opponent will likely be Thomas. A. Stewart.

Information the key against drug abuse

Drug awareness week begins November 15

Information is the key to an effective fight against drug abuse, and a local group will be striving to provide that information during Drug Awareness Week.

The Haliburton County Community Group on Drug Education and Awareness was initiated in conjunction with the provincial Anti-Drug Secretariat, formed in 1988 after the drug-related death of a Toronto youth.

The Haliburton group consists of representatives from various sectors of the community who are working together to increase awareness of substance use and abuse and to promote healthy lifestyles.

Its goal is to increase public awareness of the consequences of alcohol and drug abuse by sponsoring community events such as workshops and displays. At these events the group can present the latest information on substance use and healthy lifestyle options.

The group has prepared a Drug Awareness Resource and Education Directory which is available to the general public. The directory lists sources of educational materials, counsellors and referral agencies, self-help organizations and treatment services which are available to county residents.

Alcohol and drug problems can touch any family. Recent studies by the Addiction Research Foundation illustrate the extent of drug use among young people.

Alcohol is the most commonly used drug. Almost 60 per cent of students in grades seven to 13 have used alcohol at least once during the past year. Sixteen per cent drank weekly.

Encouraging youths not to drink is very difficult. Alcohol is widely available and advertising makes it seem as though it is necessary to have a good time.

Tobacco is the second most popular drug. Twenty four per cent of students smoked at least once in the past year. Youths are more likely to smoke if their parents smoke.

The third most common drug is marijuana or hash oil. Twelve per cent of students 11 to 19 years of age in the survey reported using cannabis at least once in the past year. Cannabis can affect health and possession is illegal.

The first ingredient of any action against alcohol or drug abuse is information. Parents need to know the facts in order to recognize warning signs in their children and to share information with them. Young people need to know the facts, so they can make informed decisions.

The opening ceremonies for Haliburton's Drug Awareness Week are on Friday, November 12 at Hart Lodge, starting at 7 p.m.

Other events will occur throughout the week of November 15 to 19. For more information, call Sheila Zimon at 754-2532.

Stanhope could get community policing

Township without a town could be policed using volunteers

by Carol Moffatt

The residents of Stanhope Township just aren't going to take it any more. Crime, that is.

And if a group of interested residents have their way, community policing may be on its way in the township without a town.

A meeting held in the Community Hall was well attended despite the weather and the World Series, said Sergeant Doug Bernardi, liaison officer for Stanhope and organizer of the get-together. He was joined by Community Services Officer Mike Landry who was the lead officer in the creation of community policing in Haliburton.

"There were three people at the meeting in Haliburton, so this is a great turnout," said Bernardi about the group of 18 residents.

The meeting came only a week after a string of break-ins netted thieves food, money and cigarettes from several businesses along Highway 35 in Stanhope. But thanks to the efforts of some local restaurant goers the suspects in the burglaries were arrested only the day after they occurred.

"It's efforts like this that help police do their job," said Bernardi.

There are only 24 officers in Minden and with ongoing cutbacks and increased paperwork, officers need all the public help they can get. Bernardi said Minden officers have responded to 2,290 occurrences since January of this year, not including vehicle accidents. It works out to 173 time-consuming occurrences per officer since January. This is overloading the small force here.

"The officer may start the report, but get called away to another occurrence. If there are suspects and evidence, the officer has to attend the scene and then do all the computer work," said Bernardi.

Community policing projects are successfully underway in many areas including Dorset, Minden and Haliburton, the latter is called the star of community policing said Bernardi.

"We found very quickly the response from the community was great and in Haliburton it's gone to new heights.

What began in Haliburton Village as a test project in 1990 has resulted in a solid, independently run committee that governs itself and only seeks advice from local police.

"People didn't know the police, they didn't report things and they always said they didn't see anything. Once the office was built and they got to know the officer who was always around, the communication level rose dramatically and the crime level decreased. We rounded up a lot of bad guys hanging around town. It's all about getting back into the community," Bernardi said.

In Haliburton, committee members patrol the Bluegrass Festival,

Highland Games, carnivals, street events and are even trained in CPR, hypothermia and citizens' powers of arrest. They raise their own money for specially labelled vests, photo identification and radios. But they are the exception said Bernardi.

"We have to use a different concept in Stanhope. The problem is not having a town where we can have an office"

Sgt. Bernardi

"In other communities the committee acts as a liaison with the police."

In Stanhope the playing field is very different. There is no main street of shops, no specific hang-outs for teenagers, and no one place that attracts criminals. What there are in Stanhope are a lot of dark cottage roads, isolated roadside businesses and many darkened black windows that no one sees.

"We have to use a different concept in Stanhope. The problem is not having a town where we can have an office," said Bernardi.

He added that this is a zero-cost concept and a little building on a corner is not in the cards for Stanhope. And even though half of Carnarvon is in Minden, the whole area will be included in the jurisdiction of the Stanhope committee.

Bernardi said the idea of community policing means it's up to the committee to develop methods based on specific problems. "We want to start at the bottom up here by trying to identify the problems and concerns of the residents of Stanhope."

His suggestions for getting the community involved include a Merchant Alert telephone pyramid for letting neighboring business owners know about bad cheques, rowdy customers, counterfeit money and any other trouble that may arise.

Other ideas included having criminal investigators speak to groups about how to be aware in the community, having officers speak to children about safety, and getting involved in a new program called Police and Community Together (PACT) where committee members spend time with officers to better understand how the police station operates.

"There's never a minor call, just a matter of priority," said Bernardi. He added that it helps if people understand how and why their calls sometimes get delayed. It helps relations between the police and the public.

Bernardi said the committee could also start to prepare the township for the inevitable implementation of 911 which requires proper signage and numbering.

"As long as it's ethical, moral and reasonable we can do anything."

Several people attending the meeting agreed to sit on the fledgling committee to determine the future of the concept. The first meeting will be this Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the Community Hall. Everyone is welcome to attend.

Safety tips for Hallowe'en

While witches, ghosts and goblins come out to haunt us on Hallowe'en, parents must be on the alert for some of the more serious dangers that can cause our children harm.

When kids head out for trick or treating on October 31, they should remember that Hallowe'en is an important time for them to turn up their radar and heed the words of Bert and Gert, the Alert Twins, to always "stay alert . . . stay safe."

Here are some important safety tips from the national streetproofing organization. Parents should discuss these tips with their kids to help ensure a safe and happy adventure on Hallowe'en night.

*Encourage your kids to wear make-up rather than a mask so they can see properly. A short costume is easier to walk in than a long one.

*Make sure your kids go trick or treating with family or friends. Make sure you know their route.

*Check the treats your kids collect.

*Ask your kids to walk, not run, and to look all ways before crossing the street. Trick or treat on one side of the street, then the other side.

*Tell kids to go only to homes with their lights on.

*Tell them never to go anywhere with a stranger.

*If someone asks them to go into a house alone, tell your kids to refuse.

*Give your kids a flashlight to help light their way.

*Know the block parent homes in your area and make sure your kids do too.

Ithaca Deerslayer has fast handling without sacrificing accuracy

This feeding problem drives home the fact that you should always make sure the ammunition you are going to use will cycle through the action of your gun before you go afield.

The Challengers shot well, averaging five-shot groups of five inches or less at 100 yards.

Trajectory of the sabots was surprising. Anyone who has fired rifled slugs from a standard smooth-bore would generally agree that the trajectory could be compared to the arc of a rainbow. I expected the Deerslayer II to shoot four or five inches high at 50 yards when it was sighted to zero at 100 yards. But, at half the distance, the sabot slugs printed about two and a half inches high. That would eliminate the need to aim low at close range with the gun sighted for 100 yards.

Along with its accuracy, the Ithaca Deerslayer II has a number of noteworthy features. Along with all of the Ithaca pump shotguns, it is bottom-eject. Instead of throwing the empty hulls out the right side of the receiver, the Ithaca ejects through the bottom. This is especially convenient for left-handed shooters since the empties don't fly across in front of your face when you cycle the action. It's also a plus for those people who load their own ammunition. Waterfowlers will appreciate that feature since the empties drop at your feet in the blind or boat instead of out into the bog.

Another feature that can make the Ithaca truly ambidextrous is the availability of a left-handed safety, which can be ordered separately.

While we're on the subject of the gun's safety, it is considerably quieter than most cross-bolt type safeties. That's a bonus when the buck of your dreams steps out from behind a spruce a few yards away. Many a mossyhorn has made good his getaway because of the click of a noisy safety.

Some of the Ithaca pump shotguns have interchangeable barrels and the smooth-bores (with the exception of the Deerslayer) feature choke tubes for added versatility. But this particular Deerslayer II model has solid barrel/receiver, which explains its exceptional accuracy. The floating barrel, which means it isn't attached to the magazine tube, also contributes to the gun's ability to shoot tight groups because the entire barrel heats up evenly.

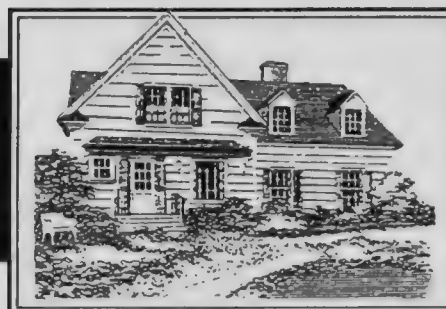

For mounting a scope on the Deerslayer II, a standard Weaver #62 base (or equivalent) is required. If you plan to mount a scope such as the Simmons Whitetail Classic 4X40, you will need a set of the higher rings than standard so there is enough clearance for the larger 40-mm objective lens.

The range conditions at the time of the test were sunny and warm (about 21C or 70F) with a slight breeze.

Anyone who likes the fast handling qualities of a short barreled pump shotgun for hunting deer but doesn't want to sacrifice accuracy for speed and stopping power, will appreciate the Ithaca Deerslayer II. At ranges up to 100 yards (or a little more), it is an excellent choice.

Haliburton child care programs celebrate week of the child

The Child Care Forum of Haliburton County recently celebrated the Week of the Child (October 16-23). Many exciting events were planned by the various child care programs across our county in celebration of our most precious resource - our children.

Wee Care hosted an open house on Wednesday, October 20. This provided a wonderful opportunity for parents of children attending this program or anyone interested in Wee Care's program to pop in, meet the teachers and view first hand their terrific facilities.

The Dorset Children's Centre, a licensed child care facility located in the north end of our county, also hosted an open house and tea on Thursday to provide their community with an opportunity to see their centre. A special invitation was extended to seniors in the community in the hopes of enhancing their involvement in the centre's activities.

Cardiff Nursery School, a licensed nursery program serving the more southerly region of the county, continued with their quality program throughout the week, just as they have for the past 13 years.

A lovable, purple dinosaur made a special appearance at CHACE Day Care Centre on Tuesday, at CHACE Place, Minden Resource Centre on Wednesday and at CHACE Place, Haliburton Resource Centre on Thursday.

The Child Care Forum held its regular monthly meeting on Thursday. The forum, a sub-committee of the Social Action Committee, was established in the fall of 1992 as a result of a recommendation from the 1990 study "Child Care: The New Heritage, Child Care Strategic Plan for Haliburton County" conducted by Nancy M. Draper Consultants. Draper recommended that our county establish a forum comprised of representatives from the following sectors of the child care community to discuss the recommendations contained in her final report: families, provincial, county and municipal governments, day care and nursery school centres, resource centres, independent care providers, the school board, community college, the special needs community and the Social Action Committee.

By the spring of 1993, the Forum was well established, having developed its four primary working goals:

- * to advocate on behalf of families and their child care needs
- * to establish and maintain a strategy for continued planning and research on child care issues
- * to raise community awareness of child care issues
- * to establish and maintain linkages among the child care community, the larger community and the various levels of government

Two working groups have also been developed to assist in the work of the Child Care Forum: The Working Group on Children with Special Needs and the Flexible Child Care Models Working Group.

These working groups have developed several creative projects in their short tenure, including advocating for family-centred employee benefits, supporting and advocating for the integration of children with special needs into child care programs, recommending funding of school-aged child care programs for the Haliburton area, and networking and sharing information and skills with Child Care Forums in four other counties.

For more information on the Child Care Forum of Haliburton County, please call the Social Action Committee at 457-1888.

OPP remind drivers to wear seat belts

Minden OPP are reminding people in Haliburton County that seat belts are mandatory when driving a vehicle.

Section 106 of the Highway Traffic Act regulates the use of seat belts. The fine for not wearing your seat belt, not repairing an inoperative seat belt or failing to ensure that passengers under the age of 16 are wearing a seat belt or an approved child safety seat is $90.

Statistics gathered in this county indicate that there is still a high percentage of drivers who are not using their seat belts. In conjunction with seat belt month in November, Minden OPP plan to increase enforcement.

So buckle up for safety and save your money for Christmas.

Santa Claus parade is almost ready to roll

Another giant project by the Lions Club of Ontario will be ready for occupancy this fall. Assisted by the Ontario government and corporate and public donations, a resource centre for the deaf and hard of hearing being built on Paris Street in Sudbury will be occupied by the Canadian Hearing Society. This complex, built at a cost of $3.27 million will open mortgage free and will remain the property of the Lions.

This home of the C.H. society will service all of Northeastern Ontario. The Lions have six other homes for the deaf in Ontario: Milton, Woodbridge, Belleville, London, Bradford and Ottawa. Four of these homes are for deaf persons, one for deaf-blind people and the other is for deaf and multi-handicapped people. Donations in support of these homes can be made directly to: Lions Homes For Deaf People, P.O. Box 294, Oakville, Ontario, L6J 5A2. This is a registered charity, therefore donation receipts are available.

On October 5, 1985, the Minden and District Lions Club received their charter into the world's largest service organization, Lions Club International.

Only eight-years-old this club can be proud of its accomplishments. 1993/94 will be our club's busiest year ever if we are to meet the budget committee's target of $65,000 to be donated to charitable purposes.

On October 13, Donna Pacey, executive director of the Haliburton County Home Support Services, was guest speaker at our dinner meeting. Pacey's presentation was very interesting and informative. Lion Al Stott, on behalf of the Minden and District Lions Club, presented Pacey with a cheque in the amount of $1,000 to assist the Home Support Services in continuing their great work.

Plans for the Santa Claus parade are in their preliminary stages. Be sure to mark Saturday, November 27 on your calendar - that's the big day. Immediately following the parade Santa will be at the firehall to visit the with children under 12 years of age. If you wish to take part in the parade fill out the form in the advertisement in this paper and mail it or turn it in at Westside Jug City or McMahon Feed Store.

Several of the Lions turned out on October 16 to assist in the Dollo's IGA Hometown Proud tree planting at the fairgrounds. Approximately 100 trees were planted in memory of Joe Dollo for his contributions to this community.

Dates to mark on your calendar:
Sunday, November 7, Lioness Bingo.

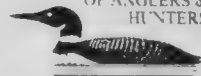

Saturday, November 27, Santa Claus Parade.

Every Thursday is Lions Bingo at 7 p.m.

Seniors enjoy Thanksgiving weekend

We were pleased to have Scott Gartshore in to play his guitar and sing for us on Saturday. Thank you Scott.

Most residents who are able to go out, spent Thanksgiving with their families. A delicious dinner was served to those unable to go out. Some had family with them. I spent the day with Terry, Norma and Norma's mother. We went to West Guilford Baptist Church, had lunch and dinner out, and drove around looking at the beautiful scenery.

To help us spend Thanksgiving Monday, Ruth and Jack Foster came to play mouth organ and guitar, and sing for us. It was very enjoyable and we sincerely thank Jack and Ruth.

Tuesday Chapel service was taken by Pastor Fast. The residents enjoyed his service greatly and thank him. At noon, the United Church held their fellowship luncheon in the auditorium. Crafts were held in the craft room in the afternoon and Corinne Arseneault had cards for us in the evening.

Silverts were here most of the day with their clothing, so most of the day was spent looking over their stock. In the evening, Earl Cooper and Don White came to play music. Thank you Earl and Don.

The Haliburton Catholic Church ladies provided a delicious tea for our Thursday Tea Party. The ladies were Gina Salvatori, Aileen Sheldie, Eva O'Hara, Grace Beradi, Gladys, Joan Heppleston and Victoria Formica came to cheer her friends. Lucille Clarke played several numbers on the piano. We had a happy afternoon and thank the ladies heartily.

In the evening Kathy Woods called Bingo for us. Thanks Kathy.

Ed and Billie Pickard who play the accordion and tom tom drums were here for Happy Hour on Friday. They make for a lively afternoon and we love to have them. Pearl Cowen tended the bar and our helpers were Bonnie Fullen, Dottie Muirhead and Mary Guillemain. Thank you Ed and Billie for the music and the volunteers for their assistance.

As I sat relaxing after supper, watching what was being done, I thought it was time someone let the dietary staff know what a good job they are doing. They work away, helping everyone, always cheerful and trying to satisfy all our complaints. I, for one, sincerely appreciate them.

If you are digging up or moving your perennial flowers and plants this fall, we at Hyland Crest would appreciate if you would donate some to us to beautify our home. Any plants you could spare may be given to Jean Robson of Hyland Crest Auxiliary or call her at 286-2737. Thank you.

Thanks Murray

Members of Club 35 Friday night paid tribute to the 11 years of leadership provided by Murray Daniels. At a dinner meeting, the former president was presented with a painting as a token of appreciation for his work. Daniels, who is also a member of Stanhope council, guided Club 35 during a period of substantial membership growth and through the construction of the group's new hall. President Kay Stevens made the presentation.

Two seriously hurt in car crash

Three people received injuries as a result of an accident on Highway 121 just north of Fenelon Falls. A 1983 Chevrolet heading north on highway 35 collided with a 1986 Hyundai whose driver was trying to cross the highway. Two passengers, Patricia Gaskin, 66, and Alison Gaskin, 26, of Willowdale, in the Chevrolet received major injuries and were taken to Ross Memorial Hospital in Lindsay. The driver of the Hyundai received minor injuries. The driver of the Chevrolet, Bradley Gaskin, was unharmed.

by Dave McAdam Legion Branch 636

Remembering our freedom fighters

To the members of Legion Branch 636, this is the time of year that we again bring to the forefront the principal reason for our mandate as a Legion. That mandate is honouring the remembrance of our comrades who lost their lives so that all Canadians can live in freedom. We take for granted this peace and the rights we enjoy because of it. This is especially evident now at a time when we have the choice to choose, by the election process, the people and government who will run our country.

Your Legion is entering the Poppy Campaign. Your Poppy Chairman Jack Sykes and his committee will be counting on you as members for the support which on our initiation we all swore to give. Branch 636 will be placing poppy boxes in various stores and businesses. Members will be out with boxes on both October 29 and 30 as well as November 5 and 6. Please note: the poppies are given to the public as a remembrance tribute.

Planet earth needs attention now not during 1998 election

Each year, the Worldwatch Institute's State of the World reports chronicle an ever worsening ecological crisis. There is simply no denying that we are on a catastrophically destructive course. But we'd never know it from the current election campaign.

The absence of serious, substantive discussion about critical issues is terrifying. Pundits tell us that voters are angry and ready to register a protest vote. Well, they should be angry but not for the reasons that our political analysts suggest.

As a parent and an environmentalist, I am appalled and frightened by the absence in this election of even a mention of the global eco-crisis chronicled by the Worldwatch Institute, scientists and many environmental groups. A press conference held to demand a public debate on the environment was not even reported by most media. Apparently, the environment is not important or real enough to merit coverage.

Instead, we are bombarded with the message that the economy is the only real issue and must be served at all costs. But the economy is disconnected from the fundamental ecological capital - air, water, soil and biodiversity - on which all life depends. The demand for endless economic growth in a finite world that has limits is inevitably destructive.

Campaign rhetoric informs us that the deficit is such a threatening monster that we must consider sacrificing even our most "sacred trusts" - social services, medicare and welfare - to reduce it. With such a priority, politicians will not introduce costly programs to combat global warming, deforestation, air and water pollution or the consequences of the rapid industrialization in the south.

A serious attempt to clean the Great Lakes alone will cost tens, if not hundreds, of billions of dollars. It would be political suicide to propose massive expenditures that may not produce results for decades. So billions are spent on the Gulf War rather than on reducing carbon dioxide emissions.

None of the major parties has questioned the conventional assumptions of economics as defined by economists, business and multinational corporations. The mind set is monolithic. The National Party correctly (in my opinion) recognizes that genuine sovereignty requires national ownership of resources and industry while the Bloc Quebecois aims for Quebec independence, yet both accept the necessity of the global economy and market.

The real problem in this election is perceptual. The only way we can attempt to change the path into the future is by recognizing the hazards that lie ahead and identifying alternate routes. News reports earlier this month illustrate our blinders.

A bureaucrat from the Immigration Department defended Canada's high immigration quotas as a necessary economic stimulus. Both population and economic growth are ecological time bombs, yet their environmental ramifications are never admitted.

A Reform Party candidate added, "This country has been built on immigrants. We've all come from somewhere else."

No one mentioned the aboriginal people who

Reflections

by David Suzuki

already occupied the country when the first European immigrants arrived. Ironically, among the surviving aboriginal cultures we could find some of the elements of respect for nature that we need to get back in balance with our surroundings.

Jobs and the deficit occupy a large part of campaign reports, but not the loss of jobs from environmental degradation. The massive shutdown of the Atlantic ground fishery is a consequence of unsustainable harvesting of potentially renewable resources.

Unemployment in the west coast fishery results from jobs lost because of industrial pollution or over-harvesting. All across Canada, communities are losing jobs in the forest industry through mechanization and depletion of forests.

Even with our focus on the economy, we spend little money on preventing toxic pollution in the first place. Instead, we leave future generations immense health problems and costs by using the environment as a seemingly cheap and limitless dump for our chemical debris.

The need to rethink economics was shown when Bell Canada announced plans to cut 5,000 jobs in retaliation for the failure to receive permission to increase local telephone rates. Bell's 1992 profits totalled $931 million. The job cuts are designed to increase the returns on equity from 11 per cent to its allowed 13.25 per cent (Globe and Mail, September 29).

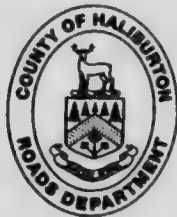

Yet the profit-driven private sector is held up as the salvation for the economy instead of being questioned on its commitment to protecting jobs and communities.

Until we shift our perspectives to recognize that the environment affects every aspect of our lives, we won't see through the tired rhetoric of this campaign. We can't afford to wait for another election.

Women's Institute welcome district president Crane

The monthly meeting of Minden Women's Institute was at "The Terrace" on the afternoon of Oct. 20th with 20 members and two guests present.

The President Jean Lacey welcomed all and mentioned that our District President Eleanor Crane was also there. There was a little business done.

Irene Moore reported sending 16 cards since last meeting and collections were taken for Card Fund and Pennies for Friendship. The Convenor Freda Hulbig read a few notes from current newspapers. Then Mrs. Crane told us that the District Big Bucks euchre games earlier this month at Burnt River were very successful and that she is glad to join us here.

The president lead us in a short Memorial service and prayers on the death of member, Joyce Hewitt, and we are making a donation in memory of her.

After adjournment all enjoyed the snacks and a social half hour followed.

The next meeting is Nov. 17th at 2 at Common Room at the library and homemade or homegrown articles are to be auctioned at that time.
